

Impact High · Difficulty Medium · Misuse risk Medium

THE MOVE

Point -> Reason -> Evidence / Example -> Point (restate)

START HERE

Before answering any important question, identify: what is my point? One reason. One example. Then restate the point.

SAY THIS

PREP Phrases	"My view is [Point]. The reason is [Reason]. For example, [Example]. So I would say [Point]."
Example Bridges	"A concrete example of that is..."
Mini-PREP	"Yes — because it saves us a week. We saw that on the last sprint. So yes."
PREP Under Pressure	"Let me answer that directly, then give you my evidence."
Point Restaters	"So, coming back to where I started: X."

AVOID

- In deeply emotional conversations where structure feels cold and clinical.
- In creative or brainstorming sessions where open-ended flow is more valuable than structured argument.
- When the relationship and context call for natural conversation rather than presentation mode.

REMEMBER

When your mind goes blank, PREP is the exit.