THE MOVE

Cut words in half -> Lead with the point -> Earn elaboration

START HERE

Take whatever you were about to say and cut it in half. Lead with the most important word or sentence. Leave the rest.

SAY THIS

Brevity Openers	"Short version: ..."
Cut Phrases	"Actually — let me say that more simply."
Instant Answers	"Done."
Email Compression	"Decision needed by Friday: option A or B. My recommendation: A."
Brief but Warm	"Short reply, warm intent: yes, gladly."

AVOID

- In relationship-building contexts where brevity reads as cold or dismissive.
- When explaining complex technical topics to non-experts — completeness matters more than brevity.
- In emotional conversations where being concise can feel uncaring.

REMEMBER

Draft long, send short.
