

Impact Low · Difficulty Easy-Medium · Misuse risk A bookmark becomes manipulative when it is used to bury a concern while

THE MOVE

Marker + Value + Return path + Continue. -> Marker: "I want to bookmark that." ->
Value: "...because it may change the decision / because I do not want to lose it." ->
Return path: "...after this point / before we close / in the next message." -> ?

START HERE

Name the point and say when you will come back: "Bookmarking the timeline issue — I want to return to it after this example."

SAY THIS

Quick markers	"Can I put a pin in that?"
Warm / social	"Can I put a little pin in that? I want to come back when we have space."
Professional / meetings	"Let us bookmark the resourcing issue and return to it before we close the agenda."
Naming the return	"I want to bookmark the staffing concern because it may affect the whole plan. After the timeline, let us return to it before we decide."
Digital / text	"Bookmarking this thread: the handoff risk is separate from the design question. I will respond to it below."
High-pressure / conflict	"I do not want to lose the safety concern. I am bookmarking it now, and I want us to address it before any decision."

AVOID

- The point is urgent, vulnerable, or safety-related
- The point is clearly the main issue, not a side-thread
- The other person is asking for your direct attention now

REMEMBER

A bookmark is only as trustworthy as your return.