

Impact High · Difficulty Easy-Medium · Misuse risk It fails when you treat every bid as either an interruption to reject or a full o

THE MOVE

Notice: this is a bid, not background noise. -> Name or join: "That sounds exciting," "That looks frustrating," "Show me," "I saw this." -> Follow through: ask one relevant question, celebrate, help, laugh with them, or schedule a return. -> ?

START HERE

Look up or reply, name the signal in ordinary language, and add one small follow-through - or, if you cannot respond well now, acknowledge the bid and schedule a clean return.

SAY THIS

Fast acknowledgement "I saw that."

Social and humour bi... "Wait, that sounds interesting. What happened?"

Join the bid "What should I notice?"

Professional and effo... "I hear there is a concern under that. What should I not miss?"

Busy moments and ti... "I cannot pause fully, but I heard the concern. Say the headline."

Repair and return "I missed that. Say it again - I want to catch it."

AVOID

- The bid is unsafe, coercive, harassing, or boundary-violating.
- You are exhausted enough that a fake warm response would be dishonest.
- A crisis requires direct action rather than relational expansion.

REMEMBER

Treat bids like door knocks, not alarms.