

Impact Medium · Difficulty Hard · Misuse risk It curdles into pressure wearing soft clothing — saying "no pressure" or "no risk"

THE MOVE

Step + risk cap + control/exit + small next ask. -> I am asking for a first reaction, not a decision. A quick no is fine. Could you skim the outline and tell me what feels risky? -> This does not have to become a standing meeting. Could we try it ?

START HERE

Say one honest sentence that caps the next step, then offer a real exit: "This is just a first read, not a commitment. A quick no is completely fine."

SAY THIS

Quick one-liners	"A quick no is fine."
Proposals & meetings	"I am not asking for a full commitment yet. Could we treat this as a one-week test and review it after?"
Bounded asks	"I am asking for a first reaction, not a decision. A quick no is fine. Could you skim the outline and tell me what feels risky?"
Low-pressure invitati...	"No pressure at all; I am asking because I would enjoy it, not because I expect a yes."
Feedback & conflict r...	"This is a first read, not a final verdict. I want to check whether the pattern I am seeing matches your experience."
Sensitive & high-pres...	"You can stop me if this feels like too much. I want to raise it carefully, not force the conversation."

AVOID

- The real risk is high and needs formal handling, consent, legal advice, safety planning, or escalation.
- You are tempted to downplay consequences to get agreement.
- The person has already said no clearly.

REMEMBER

Do not say "no pressure" unless you can prove it.
