

THE MOVE

Feeling signal -> brief validation -> permission or bridge -> facts, details or next step. -> Feeling signal: name the emotional weight without overclaiming - "That sounds frustrating." -> Brief validation: show why it makes sense from their side...

START HERE

Start with one short emotion-first sentence before any explanation: "That sounds really frustrating. The detail I want to check is..."

SAY THIS

Quick openers	"That sounds really frustrating."
Everyday support	"That sounds really frustrating. What part of it hit hardest?"
Work and pressure	"I can hear there is pressure around this. Let us name that first, then sort the timeline."
Bridge to the facts	"The feeling makes sense from what you saw. The fact I need to correct is..."
Recovery and re-seq...	"I jumped to the facts too fast. Let me back up."
Boundaries and safety	"I can tell this matters. I am still not able to agree to that, but I want to respect the feeling behind it."

AVOID

- Immediate safety facts are required
- The person explicitly asks for data or a decision first
- The emotion is unclear and a label would be presumptuous

REMEMBER

Put one human sentence before the factual one.
