

THE MOVE

Notice the good news -> show real interest -> name a specific positive part -> ask one energising follow-up -> stay with their answer. -> That is genuinely good news - what was the best part of it? -> That is a proper milestone. What moment made...

START HERE

Catch the good news, resist the reflexive "nice", and say one warm, specific line with a single follow-up: "That is genuinely good news - what was the best part of it?"

SAY THIS

Quick reactions	"That's brilliant."
Digital / text	"That's brilliant news - genuinely pleased for you."
Share the joy	"That's lovely - you must be so pleased."
Energising follow-ups	"What was the best part of finding out?"
Professional wins	"Landing that is a real result - what made the difference?"
Guarded or mixed ne...	"That's a good result - happy to hear more if you feel like sharing."

AVOID

- The person is ambivalent or clearly not celebrating
- The news has ethical or safety problems
- Strong enthusiasm would feel fake or forced

REMEMBER

Join the good news, don't change the subject.
