

THE MOVE

Clear ask or recommendation + brief reason + real freedom cue + easy next option. -> I'd suggest option B because it keeps this simple. But it's your call. -> Could you read the one-page version by Thursday? No pressure if the week is ?

START HERE

Make the ask clearly, then add one genuine freedom line: "No pressure - it's completely okay if not."

SAY THIS

Everyday freedom lines	"No pressure if not."
Professional	"My recommendation would be X, but I'm open to being challenged."
Social & dating	"Come if you feel like it - no pressure."
Digital / text	"Quick ask: could you review this by Friday? No pressure if your week is packed."
Conflict & resistance	"I'm not trying to force you into my view."
High-status / busy	"I know your time is tight, so a one-line answer is completely fine."

AVOID

- You cannot genuinely accept a no.
- There is a true non-negotiable boundary, safety issue or instruction.
- You have already pressured them heavily and are using "no pressure" as a cosmetic add-on.

REMEMBER

Autonomy release only works when the freedom is real.
