

Impact Medium · Difficulty Medium · Misuse risk The move fails when the status you give is vague, inflated, strategic, needy, or

THE MOVE

Behaviour + effect: "You did X, which helped Y." -> Judgement + reason: "That was a good call because X." -> Expertise invitation: "You would be the right person to ask about X." -> Credit + specificity: "That idea was yours, and it made the ?

START HERE

Spot one real contribution and name it specifically: "That was a good call because X."

SAY THIS

|                          |                                                              |
|--------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------|
| Quick credit             | "That was a good call."                                      |
| Specific appreciation    | "The way you simplified that made it much easier to act on." |
| Status-giving questio... | "What would you look for here?"                              |
| Professional / leader... | "I want to give you credit for that part of the solution."   |
| Social / dating chemi... | "That is very you, in a good way."                           |
| Conflict / repair        | "The part I think you are right about is X."                 |

AVOID

- You do not genuinely mean it, or cannot make it specific.
- You are tempted to flatter because you want approval, access or reassurance.
- The person is uncomfortable with praise and needs privacy, brevity or a lighter touch.

REMEMBER

Give status like a secure person: specific, honest, brief, and without waiting to be praised back.