

Impact Medium · Difficulty Hard · Misuse risk It fails when you lend someone a value they never claimed, or deliver the frame

THE MOVE

Listen for an endorsed value -> name it tentatively -> connect it to the choice -> leave autonomy intact. -> Given how much you care about fairness, the process might matter as much as the outcome. -> You have said quality matters more tha...

START HERE

Name one value the person has actually stated, link it to the choice in a single plain sentence, and leave the decision with them.

SAY THIS

Quick starters	"You care about getting this right - does that point one way?"
Warm / tentative nam...	"The thing I keep hearing you value is fairness - am I reading that right?"
Work / decisions	"You have framed reliability as the priority - option B looks more consistent with that."
Framing the ask	"Because autonomy matters to you, I would put this as a choice, not an instruction."
Softening / stepping...	"I may have read your values wrong there - put me straight."
Conflict / pressure	"I am not telling you what to value - I am checking whether this fits what you already do."

AVOID

- You do not actually know their values
- The value is sensitive, contested or still raw
- Urgency requires direct action, not framing

REMEMBER

Use values they own, not values you lend.