

THE MOVE

Understand -> ask their mode -> ask permission -> give one concise idea -> hand back the choice -> check how it landed. -> That sounds exhausting. Do you want me to just listen, or would it help if I offered one possible way to approach it? -> I ?

START HERE

Ask before you advise: 'Would it help if I offered one thought?'

SAY THIS

Quick permission	"Do you want my take, or should I just listen?"
Warm and supportive	"That sounds like a lot. Would it be useful if I helped you think through options?"
Professional / leader...	"Would it be useful if I shared a possible next step?"
Conflict / resistance	"Before I offer a view, I want to make sure I've understood the concern."
High-status / busy pe...	"Would a quick outside read help?"
Shy / guarded person	"No pressure, but would it help to hear one possible option?"

AVOID

- There is an urgent safety or operational issue that needs direct action now.
- They explicitly asked for advice and are clearly ready for it.
- You have not understood the situation well enough to advise.

REMEMBER

One piece, then hand it back.
