

THE MOVE

Ask -> Tell -> Ask -> Ask: "What's your sense of this so far?" -> Tell: the one point that matters, concisely. -> Ask: "How does that land?" -> Field rule: use the structure to organise your thinking, then speak like a person.

START HERE

Ask one real question about where they are, tell one clear point, then ask what they make of it.

SAY THIS

Opening asks	"What's your sense of this so far?"
Warm framing	"I want to make sure this is actually useful to you."
Meetings, email and...	"Quick context check: what's already landed with everyone?"
The point and the clo...	"Here's the key point, in one line."
When the structure...	"I made that too structured - let me say it more simply."
Feedback and sensiti...	"Can I share what I'm seeing, and then hear your take?"

AVOID

- Token collaboration where the questions are for show, not genuine input
- Urgent commands, where a single direct instruction is what's needed
- When the person has already declined your advice

REMEMBER

Scaffolding, not the conversation.
