

THE MOVE

Situation -> Complication -> Question -> Answer -> Situation: where things stand.
Complication: what has changed or gone wrong. Question: the decision it forces.
Answer: what you recommend. -> Minimum viable move: Situation X. Complicati...

START HERE

Say it in four short beats — the situation, the one complication that actually matters, the question it forces, and your answer — then speak it like a person, not a template.

SAY THIS

Quick frames	"Here's where we are, here's the snag, here's what I'd do."
Briefings & proposals	"Where we are: [situation]. What's changed: [complication]. The question this raises: [question]. My recommendation: [answer]."
Landing the question	"The real question here is this one — not the ten smaller ones around it."
Structure with warmth	"Can I lay this out in a structured way, or would you rather just talk it through?"
When it lands badly	"I made that too structured — let me say it more simply."
Pressure & sensitive...	"There's a lot here, so let me keep it to one clear point at a time."

AVOID

- The issue is simple and needs no framing
- The listener needs speed and you are withholding the answer
- Emotion is high and validation should come first

REMEMBER

Scaffolding, not the conversation.
