

Story invitation: front

How to open the narrative lane

Perception

Listen for a headline that implies a path: a change, decision, reaction, turning point, or unusual preference.

Phrase

"Sounds like there is a bit behind that. What led up to it?"

Move

Mark the cue lightly and ask for the narrative, not a justification.

Room

Ask once. Then stop talking. The silence protects autonomy.

Story invitation: back

When to use, avoid, recover and chain

Use when

A person hints at a backstory and the setting has enough trust, time, and privacy.

Chain

Warm presence -> Story invitation -> Minimal encouragers -> Meaning reflection.

Avoid when

The cue is private, painful, public, or not offered for discussion.

Field tip

A story invitation should feel like a door, not a demand.
